

Guy House
SM-683
128 Three Notch Road (MD 235)
California vicinity
Circa 1948
Private

The Guy House was most likely built circa 1948 following the establishment of the Patuxent Naval Air Station (NAS) earlier in the decade. Prior to the formation of NAS, the county's economy was primarily based upon agriculture (tobacco) and fishing, and very little modern development was evident in this portion of the state. In 1940, the population of the Bay district was 1,287; by 1950 it had increased nearly five-fold to 10,575. With this tremendous influx of workers in so short a period, residences were constructed near the base, and later spread to outlying areas along Three Notch Road (MD 235); intense modern commercial development has occurred within the past decade, further transforming the landscape.

This 1.5-story gable-roof stucco-covered house is a common example of a mid-twentieth century Cape Cod style dwelling. Typical features of this style include a side gable roof with front-facing gable dormers and a symmetrical main elevation with central entry. The Cape Code style frequently employed Colonial Revival details such as paired multi-pane double-hung sash, dentil moldings, pilasters, and decorative window sills and lintels. These dwellings were constructed primarily during the 1940s and 1950s and the popular form was repeated throughout the suburban subdivisions built following World War II. Cape Cod style houses in the APE include the Guy House (SM-683), the Lancaster House (SM-684), the Smith House (SM-685), the Errington House (SM-678), the Aldridge House (SM-679), the Pleissa House (SM-690), and 22240 Three Notch Road (SM-702).

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The building (formerly a residence and currently serving as an office) at 128 Three Notch Road (MD 235) is located approximately 50 feet east of the road in an area characterized by mixed residential and commercial uses. Several mature trees and shrubs surround the house and a small one-story concrete block shed with a frame addition is situated northeast of the building. A gravel driveway runs along the north side of the property.

The 1.5-story building is covered with stucco has an asphalt shingle gable roof with two gable-roof dormers in the west slope of the roof. A one-story gable-roof addition extends from the south side of the dwelling. An exterior brick chimney rises along the south side of the main block. Vinyl siding covers the north and south gable ends and the dormers. A cross-gable entry porch extends from the center of the west elevation onto a modern deck. Windows throughout the house consist of modern one-over-one double-hung sash with brick sills on the first story.

The west, or main, elevation contains three bays in the main block: a central door flanked on either side by a set of paired one-over-one windows with fabric awnings. A single one-over-one window is located in the west elevation of the addition. The dormers each contain one-over-one windows. The north elevation includes two single one-over-one windows in the first story and a set of paired one-over-ones in the second story gable. The south elevation contains six bays (from south to north): a door, a single one-over-one window, a door, and three single one-over-one windows. This elevation is protected by a flat-roof porch supported by metal posts. The south elevation of the gable-roof addition contains two single one-over-one windows in the first story and a small one-over-one window in the gable. A similar window is located in the gable end of the main block.

Evaluation for:

☒ National Register ☐ Maryland Register ☐ not evaluated

Prepare a one-paragraph summary statement of significance addressing applicable criteria, followed by a narrative discussion of the history of the resource and its context. (For compliance reports, complete evaluation on a DOE Form - see manual).

The Guy House was most likely built circa 1948 following the establishment of the Patuxent Naval Air Station (NAS) earlier in the decade. Prior to the formation of NAS, the county's economy was primarily based upon agriculture (tobacco) and fishing, and very little modern development was evident in this portion of the state. In 1940, the population of the Bay district was 1,287; by 1950 it had increased nearly five-fold to 10,575 (Hammett 1991:491). With this tremendous influx of workers in so short a period, residences were constructed near the base, and later spread to outlying areas along Three Notch Road (MD 235).

This 1.5 - story gable-roof house is a common example of a mid-twentieth century cape cod dwelling. Typical features of this style include a side gable roof with front-facing gable dormers and a symmetrical main elevation with central entry. The Cape Code style frequently employed Colonial Revival details such as paired multi-pane double-hung sash, dentil moldings, pilasters, and decorative window sills and lintels. These dwellings were constructed primarily during the 1940s and 1950s and the popular form was repeated throughout the suburban subdivisions built following World War II. It is unlikely that historic or prehistoric archeological resources are preserved on this property. The extensive disturbance typically associated with construction during the last 50 years is likely to have displaced any archeological resources that may have been on this property. Similarly, commercial and residential development in the vicinity make the survival of archeological resources on adjacent properties unlikely.

Historical documentation does not indicate that this resource is associated with Criterion A, broad patterns of history or a significant event or Criterion B, an important person who contributed to local or state history. The property does not embody distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction nor does it represent the work of a master or possess high artistic value; therefore, Criterion C, architecture, does not apply. Lastly, the property is unlikely to yield information which contributes to our understanding of human history. As a result of recent modern development in the immediate area, the property lacks integrity of association, feeling and setting. The conversion of the residence to an office as well as other alterations (replacement windows and new porches/decks) have compromised the dwelling's integrity of design, materials, workmanship and location.
